In the old Zurita family house, a shield is preserved that shows two dogs facing each other and with their front legs raised under the stars. In addition, the shield is wrapped in armour, since the Zurita family were minor nobility who arrived in Valderrobres in the 18th century from Cantavieja. This family also ordered the construction of the so-called Bonica factory, which is one of the four paper factories that existed in Valderrobres between the 18th and 19th centuries.

At the beginning of the 20th century, a part of the building became the so-called Pensión Moderna, a guesthouse decorated with modernist elements which still persist.

Next to it, on the way to calle del Carmen, the Riera house is visible, which also preserves impressive arches.

On the railing between the square and Calle del Carmen was el Pelleric (the pillory), where convicted people were publicly exposed.

Now head to the other side of the stone bridge to continue.
